Barrowlands Game summary (by Craig Dutton)

Many adventurers arrived at the Barrowlands seeking their fortune, or treasures long lost. Instead, they were drawn into fighting barbarian tribesmen, as well as a plot to free the ancient evil of the Dominator, a plot that came within hairs of succeeding as the Dominator freed himself within the body of Old Man Fish, and began assembling a new coven of Taken. Meanwhile, some adventurers were so hard pressed that they were reduced to cleaning the inn in order to afford healing. In the end, the Dominator was subdued, and the Silver Spike containing his soul captured by the mage Tokage, but only after a fierce struggle that saw the Dominator and two Taken defeated, and the demon Toadkiller Dog driven off. The surviving adventures staggered away from the scene to complete the looting of local tombs; on their return, however, no bodies were to be found.

The adventurers have since begun the long trek east, to attempt to enclose the Silver Spike in the ancient God-Tree on the Plain of Fear. Behind them comes word of a new force arising to combat the Great Empire, led by a mage known as Heartless, who is said to ride a giant demonic beast into battle, as well as powerful mages known as Remora, Entropy, and Glitter.

Icchiboo 2 Game summary (by Martin Sasinek)

After the un-there rendering of RE-5 P.E.C.T., the remaining delegates schlepped the carcass of Juniper, the fraudulent Supox Ambassador, off of the control panel and set to work, utilizing the espionage expertise of Pkar of Pkar. Within seconds, the force shield was down, and each delegate was transported back to their respective vessels. Once in orbit, the planet Crap (or what was left of it) was bombarded from orbit by each ambassadorial fleet in turn, who then turned their sights on earth...or, at least tried to...Ambassador Kildmani, hearing of the Crappy Catastrophe, especially of the un-there rendering of his favourite clone...sent out his own fleet to sterilize the planet, and all witnesses to what had happened.

But before the battle could be joined, a rift opened over the planet Crap, caused by the immense number of planetary disruption charges that had bombarded the planet, and strange bubbly creatures plopped out into our universe. Calling themselves the "Orz", they pulled their own planet through the rift, setting up shop in our universe, and plunging the immediate area around the rift into such a gravity well, that every ship except the most armoured and shielded was crushed instantly, and what was left of the planet Crap and it's two lucrative moons imploded in a spectacular display of reverse evolutionary flux, sending bits of bits in every conceivable direction. That area of space, once the delegations' flagships got far enough away to speak coherently, would now be known as "Solid Space". The delegations, severely shell-shocked and tired, simply called a ceasefire and went home, licking their wounds, and plotting the next cog in the ever-churning gears of "The Game."
